

REPEAT HONORS

It's never easy getting to or staying at the top. But two 2017 Best Places to Work in Indiana honorees have discovered the secret and are making it a habit.

Microsoft Corporation has finished No. 1 in the large or major categories a staggering six out of eight times since it first entered in 2010. That year, and in 2015, the technology giant finished in the second spot.

"My leadership style is collaborative, engaging and lead by example. Our work environment at Microsoft is fun, exciting and fast paced. We are a team of resources that work together to bring results to our customers."

– Steve Sweet (accepting 2016 award at right)
enterprise account executive, Microsoft Corporation

Luther Consulting, a public health software company, made a splash in its inaugural appearance among small employers – capturing third place in 2015. The past two years the firm has earned the peak position.

"If there is anything I'm really proud of, it's that we've been able to create a culture that really does support a work/life balance. That people can earn an income and have a life ... and still have the company move forward."

– Jim Luther, founder and president
Luther Consulting